

(originally published in the December 2008 Newsletter)

For many years the question of when the bronze tablets honouring those men from St. Catharines who made the supreme sacrifice during WW I were placed on the front of City Hall has been asked. Thanks to a discovery by Arden Phair and follow-up investigation by Bill Stevens, a newspaper story on the front page of The St. Catharines Standard issue of Monday, November 11, 1940 reports the unveiling of the bronze tablets at the Remembrance Day ceremony that same day. They were unveiled by Mayor Daley and the article indicates that they will be placed on the municipal building. When the tablets for WW II were placed is still undetermined.